

Data Collection for my project Prostate Cancer Knowledge Myths and Misconceptions among Haitian Men began June 15th, 2013 in Orlando Florida. As a team we worked together to begin a successful study. This is the first study ever focusing on myths and misconceptions among Haitian Men.

I was so proud of myself breaking out of my shell and collecting data for the first time in my life. The men were very friendly and loved the free T-shirts they received. It was the beginning to a great start for me.

Thank you so much ReTool for everything that I have learned in such a short time. The experience was phenomenal and one that I can never forget. The students and I will forever be linked thanks to this experience. Dr.Odedina can not be thanked enough for being an amazing mentor. I am so grateful to have met her as well as everyone as at ReTool.

Photo Voice: Olivia Moline